DESCRIPTION

More compact than the species, Sem Ural Falsespirea is a rounded, suckering shrub with interesting texture. Its new growth emerges bright orange-red, and contrasts nicely with its mature deep green foliage. Large panicles of creamy white flowers are produced in summer.

The suckering habit of this shrub makes it useful for bank planting and erosion control. It prefers moist, well-drained sites but will adjust to drier areas, exhibiting less vigorous growth. Provide room for this attractive shrub to mature and spread.
